

MESSAGE WAS A FIERY ONE

Governor La Follette Delivered His Annual Legislative Address This Morning.

IS VERY THEORETICAL AS YET

Rough Edges Of The Plans Will Have To Be Worn Down Before They Are Available For Actual Use.

[SPECIAL BY SCRIPPS-M'RAE.] Madison, Wis., Jan. 12.—Governor La Follette delivered his third biennial message to the legislature this morning. He advocates that railroad rates should be fixed and absolutely controlled by a rate commission, preferring an appointive commission as less liable to be corrupted by political wickedness. He attacks corporation lobbyists, branding them as public enemies. He advocates a control and ad valorem assessment and taxation of street and inter-urban electric roads, gas, electric lighting and life insurance companies.

Work Begun
Both houses of the legislature organized and the reading of the long gubernatorial message out of the way. The lawmakers have gone to their homes to spend Sunday and take a deep breath for the contest for the election of a United States senator, which will be the next large event at Madison. All the candidates will be on the ground, it is said, next week and the work for the legislators. There will be the usual flood of bills and committees will have their first meetings, but practically no legislative work will be accomplished until the senatorial question is determined.

Governor's Plans
The impression is gaining ground that should Governor La Follette enter the contest he would be elected, as he would cement the administration forces that are now divided between Congressmen Cooper and Esch and Judge Charles M. Webb. This is practically admitted by the managers of the two congressional and some followers of Webb. At present Senator Quarles has a lead over any of the other announced candidates and opponents of the administration affairs that either Senator Quarles will be elected on an early ballot or that a combination of the Quarles and Webb forces will be effected resulting in the success of the latter. When it comes to counting noses, however, it seems that the opposition to Senator Quarles has a "clinch" on the election if those members can get together on any one candidate, which it is asserted can be done if the governor becomes a candidate. Governor La Follette controls 61 of the 75 republican members of the assembly on matters concerning the administration legislation and there is reason to believe that practically every vote could be had by Governor La Follette for the senate. In the state senate Governor La Follette controls 17 of the 23 republican members on matters of legislation and could get per-

STRANGE FUN CAUSES A RUN

New York Bank Was The Scene Of A Serious Yet Comical Run On A Bank.

PAID DEPOSITORS IN SILVER COIN

Bank Officials Then Refused To Accept The Old Depositors Back Again, Causing Much Dispute.

[SPECIAL BY SCRIPPS-M'RAE.] New York, Jan. 12.—Three policemen and two Jewish women were injured in a run on the State bank in Grand street, in the heart of the business section of the east side, Wednesday. The run was attended by some sensational incidents.

The 5,000 persons crowded about the bank became so insistent that they broke down an iron railing around a light well in front of the building, and it was only by desperate clubbing on the part of the police that the excited and unruly mob was prevented from forcing many of its number into the well.

The policemen and women were hurt at that point. The emergency police detail of the Delancey street station was finally called out, and policemen were stationed at intervals of five or six feet for two blocks either side of the bank.

Cause of the Run.
The cause of the run was as extraordinary as the frenzied character of the run itself. Tuesday there was a rush of depositors to get their money into the bank in time to begin to draw waiting at once, and the long line of impatient depositors convinced the excitable Jews that something was wrong with the institution. Five hundred persons waited in front of the building all Tuesday night, and their number quickly swelled to 5,000 when the bank opened Wednesday, though not all of that number were depositors.

The bank, which has deposits of $10,500,000 and a cash reserve of $4,000,000, and which, Cashier A. J. Voorhis said, earned 244 per cent profits last year, sent for money early in the day, and $250,000 was brought by the wagon load, largely in specie. At the sight of the money those waiting became only more impatient to get at it. The bank officials paid depositors off as fast as the operation could be conducted. In all, the bank paid out $550,000 and received in deposits $440,000.

Try to Redeem Money.
Remarkable scenes attended the paying off within the bank. The officers paid off in two-thirds specie and one-third bills, and some of the depositors were fairly overwhelmed by the amount of currency thrust upon them when they passed in their books.

Immediately upon getting their money into their hands and becoming convinced that the bank was able to pay them, the frantic Jews became equally anxious to get their money into the bank again, and several of them created scenes when the officers refused to accept it. The depositors were paid in specie to prevent a repetition, as this was the sixth run the bank has experienced from equally trivial causes.

Gets Sixty Pounds of Silver.
One of the aged depositors received sixty pounds of silver, and staggered under the load when he carried it away. Women swept their accumulated savings into shawls, aprons and their outer skirts, held in the form of aprons, and got through the crowd as best they could.

To payment of Wednesday night. Officers of the bank declare it is absolutely sound, and can secure $4,000,000 at an hour's notice. It received many offers of help, and declined most of them.

Of the five previous runs on this bank one was started by a fire, another by a fight, a third by a rumor in the Bryan campaign that silver dollars were to be cut in half, a fourth by the Spanish-American war, and a fifth by the failure of a bank in Nebraska. There was a small run also on a branch of the State bank in Brooklyn.

LESS PAY WHEN ON DETAIL DUTY FOR ARMY OFFICERS

Congress Aims To Cut The Salaries Of Officers Who Are Assigned To State Militias.

[SPECIAL BY SCRIPPS-M'RAE.] Washington, Jan. 12.—Gen. Miles will receive a serious cut in his pay while he is serving as adjutant general of the state of Massachusetts if the action taken by the house in committee of the whole becomes law. The army appropriation bill was being discussed leisurely under the charge of Mr. Hull of Iowa, when he startled the congressmen by offering an amendment, providing that retired officers above the grade of major should not receive the full pay of their grade when assigned to duty with the militia of the several states.

Alleged Attack on Miles.
The amendment was denounced by John S. Williams as an attack on Gen. Miles, who, he declared, is extremely persona non grata in high circles of the Republican party. It was, he said, no new thing for the Republican party to slight the heroes of the nation and push its favorites to the front, and he mentioned the Schley case as an example.

Mr. Hull insisted that he had no such thought in mind and argued that the best results were obtained from officers of the lower grades.

After a lively debate the amendment was adopted.

Cuts Into Appropriation.
Mr. Prince of Illinois also took a shot at the retired. He pointed to the fact that at the present time there are 236 brigadier generals on it and insisted that it was next to impossible for that number to have been retired by operation of the law. He later said he was not prepared to charge maladministration of the law, but he added that it took nearly one-half of the money appropriated for the army to pay the officers on the active and retired lists, and he thought the president ought to be given the power of ordering retirements.

CHURCHES HAVE LOST POWER TO ACCOMPLISH THE PURPOSES FOR WHICH THEY WERE ORGANIZED

DIVISIONS ARE RESPONSIBLE

Sermon Delivered Sunday by Rev. Barrington Affirms the State-ment

Sunday Rev. A. H. Barrington of the Christ Church delivered in the church sermon on the topic, "Manifesting the Christ Today," choosing his text from Acts X: 38: "Who went about doing good." He spoke of certain conditions existing in the world today for which the church needs a remedy. This remedy should be the church, but the church as it was today was largely the cause of many of these conditions. In short, Rev. Barrington said:

A Suicide. "Taking up a paper last week, I was more than usually stirred over an account of a suicide of a wife, and a mother, and the thought occurred, how numerous suicides are becoming. What is the reason? Are they devoid of all hope in this world? Sick, with no prospect of recovery, a burden, a tax, an incubance to relieve their loved ones, do they seek death and the grave through the ignominious path of the suicide? Where can we lay the blame for this hopelessness, save at the door of the church, because she does not—rather cannot do her duty under present conditions.

The Church. "What is your idea of the church? You know that the only world religion founded on a person is Christianity, that the only founder of a world religion that claimed to be sinless is Jesus, the Christ. Your religion and mine then is founded on an absolutely perfect man, Jesus, the Christ, the Son of God incarnate. St. Peter characterized him to Cornelius as 'One Who Went About Doing Good.' Gathering his disciples together, he condensed the law and the prophets into the two fold commandment: 'Thou shalt love thy God with all thy heart—and thy neighbor as thyself.' For them, love was to be the fulfilling of the law, and as St. John says: 'If you love the brethren, what else is there?'

But that there might be no misunderstanding the Lord said: 'As I have loved you that ye love one another.' And he declared of his disciples, 'By their fruits ye shall know them.' Our Lord's aim was practical. He supposed to unite all mankind by the bond of love, not heretofore recognized, into a universal brotherhood. Thus he built his church, Catholic, universal for all men, for time, eternity.

The Reformation. "With the growth and prosperity of the church came corruption; corruption led to an eternal upheaval known as the Reformation. Save in England it was a revolution; it established a different order of things, the revolution being successful a new principal was put in practice, namely that any man or body of men had equal right with the Son of God incarnate, to establish a church, and disintegration has been active ever since.

Results. "First among the results to be deplored, is the fact that cities, towns and villages are today burdened with church appealing for support, but which have no reason for being, except to cater to some separate principle.

"Joseph Smith, Brigham Young, Mrs. Eddy, any person mortal or immortal has just as much right to start a church if they can, as Luther, Calvin, Knox, Brown, Williams, Wesley or Campbell. All are right or all are wrong, there is no exception, no limit.

"Renouncing all authority vested in the church Catholic, there has sprung up an individualism that would leave a man a law unto himself. 'Not wanting to do this duty he says: 'I don't believe that; and he reasons that, not believing, he is released from all obligation.' So he learns to ignore the church and the church's God, and stands out a living example of lawlessness and spiritual anarchy.

"The Apostolic church ordained deacons to care for the poor, but today the church practically ignores the poor. It cannot be otherwise. The church itself is without the means and it cannot assume obligations that it cannot meet. Consequently it is justified.

HE HAD FAITH.

And It Was Justified.

"In reply to your letter of recent date, will say that I am cured as sound as a dollar. I used about three of the fifty cent packages. I was going to write you, but was holding up to see if the piles would give any further trouble. I feel no signs of the piles and believe I am cured entirely. I had faith in Pyramid Pile Cure at the start, and stuck right to the treatment. You can refer anyone to me who like. I can soon tell what Pyramid Pile Cure has done for me. Wish you much success. I remain, J. C. Kinkaid, Mgr. for Fleischman & Co., Agency at Knoxville, Tenn."

It is a well recognized fact that the best advertising an article can have, is that which is known as "word of mouth." This rightfully carries more weight than all the claims that can be set forth. It follows that Mr. Kinkaid, with his wide acquaintance, will largely promote the sale and use of Pyramid Pile Cure because—and here is the vital point—he knows whereof he speaks, and not only advocates its use but does so with enthusiasm; this is not to be wondered at, and in point of fact can anyone, after reading his letter, doubt that this remedy cures?

Pyramid Pile Cure is sold by druggists for the low price of fifty cents a package; it is in suppository form, is applied directly to the parts affected, and does its work quickly and painlessly; there is no other remedy "just as good."

A little book describing the causes and cure of piles is published by Pyramid Drug Co., Marshall, Mich., and will be sent free to any address for the asking.

quently the state per force takes up this neglected work of the church and God's poor are sent to the poor house to make their home, often with vagrants sentenced to the same place.

"Do you wonder that the hopelessly sick with nothing but suffering before them and a burden to their loved ones are tempted to commit suicide? Why, it is a mooted question today, as to whether it might not be well to put such people to death by process of law.

"Education is enforced by law in these days and parents make slaves of themselves often, that they may give their children a good education. If they should be sick they might get hopelessly behind. What shall they do? Go to the church for help? No it would be useless. What then? They join some fraternal society because it promises to care for them, if they are sick, and it compels them to care for one another. Yes, in the lodge they are taught to a limited extent the brotherhood of men. If they say: 'This is church enough for me,' do not blame them? It is not as it should be, but—well, God bless the fraternal societies, for the good they do among men.

"The increase of the ministry is a serious question in many a church today. Too few seek it, and too many are asking to be deposed that they may return to secular life. Why is this? There is a reason. Greater demands than ever are being made on the clergy and there are so many churches that the ministry is not properly supported. The living church holds up to ridicule the minister looking after a salary of $1,000.00 and house, and says he should deny himself. No, he should be commended because he wants to give all his time and energy to the Lord and not be worried over his own private affairs. Deny himself? Why his whole life is a denial. He endures often many things for the Lord's sake which he would not if he were a man among men, but for the good of the cause, he is not called upon to submit to intellectual starvation if not physical. What can be done? The living church advises a celibate clergy. Impossible in America—rather two alternatives offer themselves either require that to enter the ministry a man must have independent means or else receive the church's salary. Why, to say nothing of the two Episcopal churches, Janesville could get along better with at least one half the number of churches that she now possesses. You could be just as good and you could do more good. And what virtue is in the church if not to teach you to be good and to do all the good you can among men, in accordance with the example left you by your Lord and Savior Jesus the Christ.

The Practical Life. "Brethren, I believe the Reformation was a necessity and that great good resulted, and that are perniciously has been accomplished, and it is time to try and check the evils that have resulted, and that are perniciously active still. I refer to the disintegrating process and individualism. It is time to gather up the frayed ends of Gospel truth and weave them into one which again to make Christianity tell for the brotherhood of men.

"First then settle in your minds, whether Christianity is a theory or a life, if a theory go on your individual, independent way, only thinking of your brother whom you can selfishly get some personal benefit. If it is a life, then in business, in society, in the home, in all the walks of life, let us henceforth act, not as individuals, but as members of the one family for which our blessed Lord was contended to be crucified and slain.

Epiphany. "Last Friday was Epiphany, when we celebrate the leading of the Magi to the church by the light of the star of Bethlehem. Christ descended, he is manifested by men through the lines and acts of men, who show their love of God through the love of their fellow men. Religion, you know is a practical thing, and if you and I would manifest the 'true light that lighteth every man coming into the world,' we must get together, unite, build up the church until it may equal at least the fraternal society in the good it is doing for mankind and no longer waste our energy and means in supporting human theories.

"It is not by your protestations of faith, hear in mind, but by God's fruits that you prove your right to be known as followers of Him 'who went about doing good.'"

CHAS. WOODSTOCK VERY SUCCESSFUL

Has Been Appointed Principal of the New School in Kenosha—Is Now in Charge

Charles B. Woodstock, a graduate of the Janesville high school, is making more than a success as an instructor in the public schools of Kenosha. Until recently he was serving as principal of the Frank school, one of the graded institutions of Kenosha. A new school building has been erected in that city, and the board of education considered Mr. Woodstock the most efficient in the whole corps of instructors, to take charge of the school as principal. In regard to the change the Kenosha Evening Gazette says: "Mr. Woodstock is considered one of the best grade teachers in the city, and his work at the Frank school has been of such high order that the members of the board believe that he just the man to take charge of the large, new building." Charles Woodstock was a member of the class that received diplomas from the Janesville high school in the June of 1899 and is also a graduate of the Whitewater normal, where he completed a course of study in 1903. He is well-known in this city and among the teachers of Rock county. Last year he was principal of schools at Schofield, Wis.

RAILROADS SUFFER FROM SNOW STORMS

Worst Winter for Traffic in Many Years—Trouble Experienced at Watertown.

This winter has been one of the worst that has been experienced by the railroads in many years, and hundreds of dollars are daily spent by the traffic companies of the north and northwest in contending with the snow. More snow has fallen, and the storms which have raged have been of such a blizzardous character that over and over again traffic has been tied up on some branches or lines of the roads through the storm-swept belts. Each time trains have been snowed in and others run off time, meaning a loss to the companies and it has been necessary to send out snow plows and track cleaners to reopen traffic. On the Northern Wisconsin division of the Northwestern road near Watertown, the greatest trouble in southern Wisconsin has been met with. In former years very little snow has fallen and the tracks on this portion of the line, which run over a prairie, are unprotected from the snow by fences, allowing the drifts to pile across the track and stop all trains over that route. Recently the passenger train due here at 8:30 in the evening did not arrive until after four o'clock the next morning, having been stalled at this point in going through the drifts. The number of windows in the cab of the engine had been broken and upon arrival in the city the garments of the engineers in many places were frozen stiff. It is very probable that the management will deem it advisable before the commencement of next winter to erect fences along this portion of the division as a protection against the snow. The tracks throughout the country are nearly all unprotected, there having been no necessity heretofore to have protection, such a small amount of snow having fallen each year. In many places where formerly the lines were protected by woods on either side of the tracks the saw and ax of the lumberman have made the country an open prairie and old fashioned blizzards which formerly battled in vain against the trees now sweep down and cover the tracks with drifts higher than the cars on the engines.

THE SENATORIAL FIGHT IS NOW ON

Four Avowed Candidates and Three Dark Horses Are Being Worked For.

Madison, Wis., Special.—With four avowed candidates and three dark horses "available," the Wisconsin senatorial contest has opened with prospects of a long deadlock. It seems to be the plan of the La Follette leaders, although there is no verification obtainable, to allow the election to be delayed until Governor La Follette himself can with good grace enter the contest. We can do this it is said, when the session of the legislature has so far progressed as to assure the passage of the reform measures he advocated on the stump in the recent campaign. It is suggested also that the entire administration strength, which is a majority of the legislature on joint ballot, could be gathered for him should a deadlock continue for a considerable length of time. At present, however, Governor La Follette is looked upon as merely a possibility. It is known that he desires to go to the senate. He has made no announcements of immediate aspirations in this direction but nobody here doubts that he would be averse to having the senatorial lightning strike his rod at once.

Another dark horse is Chairman W. D. Connor of Marshfield, who, as head of the La Follette state central committee, directed the governor's successful campaign. He is also known to have a busy senatorial bee, but he will keep Isaac Stephenson of Marinette is looked upon as more deserving of the toga if it is in the gift of the La Follette machine, he having contributed longer and more generously to the organization than has Mr. Connor.

In view of the uncertainty of the situation the above announced candidates are looked upon as more significant than those who have formally entered the race. Senator J. V. Quarles, who seeks a second term on the creditable record of his last six years at Washington, has the largest following of pledged members, but because of his leadership in the state-wart faction it is doubted whether he can secure enough administrative votes to effect his re-election, but there are hints that he will receive support from the friends of Judge Webb of Wood county. It is also suggested with a good deal of directness that in the event that Mr. Quarles recognizes his defeat his supporters will flock to the Webb standard and possibly elect the Grand Rapids jurist. Congressman J. J. Esch of La Crosse has a vigorous coterie of supporters who assert confidence in his prospect. His recent declaration in favor of government control of railroad rates has given him some favor in administration circles. Congressman H. A. Cooper of Racine is also actively supported and being an avowed La Follette man is said by his friends to have the best chance of securing the administration strength necessary to elect.

DECLARES AGE IS NOT A BAR NOW

INTERESTING GOSSIP ON THE SUBJECT OF EMPLOYEES' AGE.

RAILROADS CHANGE IDEAS

Mature Men Are Safer for Large Corporations Than Young Boys.

The following article regarding the employment of men of mature age by railroad corporations will interest many Janesville men who have spent much of their life in the service of these corporations:

"An experienced railroader of forty years of age is worth more to us than a dozen bright boys of twenty who have the business to learn. The Burlington road sets no age limit, and, while giving its employees every chance to work up in the service, will not hesitate to hire a man of mature years when the situation demands it."—D. Miller, general manager of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad.

Railways, big corporations and other institutions, which about three years ago adopted the policy of refusing employment to men over thirty-five years, have apparently come to the conclusion that the rule has failed to produce the results expected, and in the near future it is likely that several of the Chicago railways and corporations that were first to halt the innovation with delight will change their present rule and employ experienced men at any age in any department.

Too Much Youth Changes Plan. The disastrous effects of too much youth, which has caused the reaction, has been especially apparent in the operating departments of several of the leading railways, and it has brought home heads of the roads the fact that in an emergency a man of forty or forty-five who is conversant with the detail of his position is more reliable than a brilliant young man of twenty-five.

The Chicago & Alton railroad, one of the first to make a cast iron rule barring the hiring of men over the age of thirty-five, has given notice that it will reserve the right to hire at least one-half of the men in the operating departments from the ranks of experienced men, regardless of age.

The Boston & Maine road has given notice that it will entirely abandon the principle of the age limit and that no matter what a man's age is, if he can show himself to be a competent railroader, he is eligible for its service.

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad will in future suit its convenience without regard to the age of the men to be hired, and several other roads, while they have not made any definite announcement in the matter, have practically abandoned their preference to those who have to learn it.

The majority of the lines running out of Chicago still refuse to employ men of over thirty-five years, who have no experience in the business, but a trial of two and in some cases three years has proven to them that for hundreds of positions young men cannot be found who will produce the results obtained from an experienced man of some years' standing.

"The Burlington road," said its general manager, D. Miller, "has found by long experience that it is quite impossible to operate successfully with only young men. We have always given our young men every chance to rise in the service of the company, and to some extent follow the civil service custom, but we have always maintained that no age limit should prevent the company securing the services of a man whose experience would make him valuable to us."

"Reliable men over thirty-five are too valuable an asset for any company to overlook."

No More Experiments. General Manager Williams of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad said:

"While civil service or seniority is all right in its place, and we to a great extent adhere to it, there are many occasions on which we have vacancies; high up in the operating department, and none of the younger men in our offices are ready to fill them. We don't care to try any more experiments, and consequently we get a man who can fill the bill, and never bother about his age. We must have results."

"In the employment of inexperienced men, however, we adhere strictly to the age limit. One can readily understand that we must insist on the age limit in these cases, as the general average of promotion will not allow a man to become a conductor or an engineer till he has reached the age of twenty-eight or thirty, he having gone into the service at the age of twenty-one."

"A young man can learn more readily than a middle-aged one, but in many cases the ability of the middle-aged man is worth more to the road than the quickness of the youngster."

Will Not Draw Age Limit.

An official of the Chicago & Alton railroad, one of the first western lines to adopt the ironclad rule, which found that strict adherence thereto was productive of much trouble, said:

"It is quite true that in future when dealing with organizations we will reserve the right to hire at least one-half our trainmen from among outside men who have the necessary experience. In dealing with men in this class we will not draw the age limit as strictly as we did some little time ago or as some lines do now. I do not mean the road will abandon the civil service principle, but in employing experienced men we will not allow the matter of age to become a bar."

The Boston & Maine railway has not only abandoned its age limit with regard to experienced men, but includes inexperienced as well, and will in future hire men of any age and in any capacity.

Other roads and corporations, while they have not come out and announced their intention of removing the age limit, have allowed it to become practically a dead letter, especially in the operating department.

The experiences of three years has proven to their satisfaction that there are fewer wrecks and a much smoother service when their trains are in the hands of experienced conductors and engineers than when practically the entire service was manned by younger men.

From Other Roads

The new articulated compound freight locomotive of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, which is the only one of the Mallet type in the country and by far the largest in the world, was placed in active service Jan. 5, helping freight trains over the grade from Sand Patch to Rockwood, on the Connellsville division, a distance of sixteen miles.

The Alaska Central railroad, building from Seaward to the Tanana river in Alaska, has changed hands. Canadian capitalists have purchased the interest owned by Swedish brothers of Chicago. The Chicago capitalists did not want to build more than twenty miles a year. This did not suit the stockholders, so the sale was perfect. The road will be rushed to completion.

Another desperate effort is being made to utilize the switch yards, built at an outlay of about $4,000,000, at Stickney, which have been practically idle ever since built. The latest scheme is to form a new company and merge the Chicago Terminal Transfer, the Chicago & Western Indiana, the Stickney company, and the Chicago Subway company. To carry out this scheme all the railroads would have to abandon their present switch yards and warehouses in Chicago, worth hundreds of millions.

The passenger department of the Burlington has arranged to educate the farmers along its lines in Illinois regarding the scientific methods of seed planting. The special train which will be started out Friday with this end in view will be in charge of W. H. Manns, industrial commissioner, and will tour the state of Illinois until Jan. 21. Among the special speakers will be Dean W. A. Henry of the University of Wisconsin.

MORE MILLINERY FOR THE HORSES

Slippers Are the Latest Fad for the Ultra Swell Equines to Wear.

In some cities slippers are made for horses for wear during the winter months. This will likely be adopted in Janesville in the not distant future. The slipper in question is similar to that which the luxurious bachelor may be expected to don in the comfort and privacy of his chambers. The sole is made of some hard substance, while on the outside is a covering of carpet material. The top is made of heavy canvas. It opens at the front and is laced with a white string along the top of the hoof, giving the slipper a rakish and dashing effect.

It is expected that when horses are equipped with these slippers they will not slip on the icy pavements, their legs will not be cold and they will be fashionably attired. This is the second step in the proper garbing of horses, the first one being the adoption of bonnets in summer. Good well bred horses can claim to good form in the summer-time unless they wear a straw bonnet within which cooling leaves are placed. With a straw hat and slippers feet, Janesville horses could give the equine four hundred all over the country pointers in toggerly that will make this a center for horse fashions.

While the rumor is not confirmed, it is reported that some enthusiasts have been submitting plans and specifications for equine pajamas which will enable the hard-worked animals to sleep with more comfort and less exposure.

COST OF POOR RELIEF WAS GREATLY REDUCED

Only Half As Much Assistance Required in Past Two Months As During Previous Year.

According to the books of Poor Commissioner Kenvon that official has been required, thus far this winter, to render only half as much assistance to the poor as was demanded for the corresponding season last year. There have only been half as many calls for coal and wood during November and December. The absence of much severe weather and the larger abundance of available work is ascribed as the causes.

RUSSIA'S DETERMINATION, JAPAN'S BUDGET.

The statement by the Russian ambassador that there is no Russian who at this moment can admit the possibility of entering into discussion of peace, and that the war will therefore continue to the bitter end, disappoints the hopes of the millions who have been eager that the fall of Port Arthur would be signal for negotiations for a settlement between Russia and Japan. The Ambassador's statement is all the more interesting because he declares that by the beginning of next summer's campaign Russia will have 700,000 men in Manchuria, a force enabling her to prosecute the campaign with new vigor and power.

One cannot but admire the unquenchable spirit exhibited in this utterance of the Russian Ambassador, which undoubtedly reflects the spirit of the ruling powers in Russia. It may be admitted that Russia has resources lying within herself which would enable her to prolong the war for an indefinite period, regardless of the opinion of the outside world. By drawing further upon her gold reserve and issuing irredeemable paper money, she might be able to finance the war for a considerable period without further placing of loans on foreign markets. But, after all, no nation can afford to isolate herself absolutely from the international court of public opinion, and if the moral and financial support of the world should be withdrawn completely, Russia would find herself in a position which it would be difficult for her to carry on an unpopular war much longer, especially with a steadily increasing aggressive party at home demanding international reform.

On the side of Japan, victory, of course, strengthens her credit, and increases the enthusiasm of her people, so that while she would be glad no doubt, after having accomplished all that she sought at the beginning of the conflict, to enter into negotiations for peace, she is still able to maintain the war. Moreover, she has disclosed financial resources that were scarcely expected at the beginning of the war. The new budget for the year beginning with April 1 appears favorable. The ordinary revenue next year will be about $148,000,000, an increase this year of about $4,150,000. The extraordinary revenue will be about $4,400,000, a decrease of about $9,400,000. The ordinary expenditures for next year will be over $74,000,000, a decrease of something less than $10,000,000. The ordinary expenditures will show a decrease of over $16,000,000. The total expenditure of the next fiscal year will be about $32,000,000 less than this year, a saving made by reduction in working expenses and the suspension of public works. Japan's special war fund for the next fiscal year is estimated about $288,000,000, which is obtained by a surplus of revenue amounting to $61,500,000; from drafts on the government's working fund amounting to $4,000,000; from additional revenue by increase of taxation amounting to $27,000,000, and by issue of bonds and temporary loans to an amount of $285,000,000. The increase of revenue from taxation will be derived from increase of duties upon 181 descriptions of goods, from income tax, inheritance tax, land tax and other special forms of taxation.

THE COLORADO CONTEST.
Colorado is passing through another epidemic of political disorder. A contest over the Governorship has raged since the day after the election. The Supreme court was drawn into the controversy, and through its activity extensive frauds in Denver were uncovered and a score or more of ballot box stuffers were sent to the penitentiary. The court ordered the vote in a number of Denver precincts thrown out on the ground of wholesale fraud. Alva Adams, the democratic candidate for governor, had an apparent plurality on the face of the returns, but his title to the Governorship was impugned by the discovery of an organized conspiracy in Denver to count him in, and steps were taken at once to review the vote on which he claimed election. The Supreme court has now authorized a sweeping investigation of the Denver election—one which will go to the root of the vicious election practices which have made that city notorious as the home of the repeater and the tissue ballot manipulator. This judicial investigation cannot be concluded for several months. Meanwhile, the legislature has taken a hand in the adjudication of the Governorship contest. Both legislative houses are strongly republican, and they have the right to canvass in joint session the vote cast for state officials and to pass on the validity of the titles issued by the state canvassing board to officers elected. Some differences of opinion have arisen among the republican members of the two houses. The holdover Lieutenant Governor and the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the new House of Representatives have come into collision, and in joint session a conflict was precipitated on Friday between the majority who want to reseat Governor Peabody and the minority, who want to give the office to Mr. Adams or leave it vacant until the result of the Supreme court's inquiry is made known.

To the people of Colorado, indeed, the pressing question is not so much whether Adams or Peabody was elected as whether the state is to rid itself of the domination of the ballot box stuffers and the thug. Two years ago it was proven that a democratic representative in Congress owed his election to the frauds committed by the Denver "ring." Rather than defend an impossible title, that representative, the Hon. John F. Shafer, resigned his seat. This year in defiance of the instructions and warnings of the Supreme court, these same election thieves ran up an overwhelming vote in Denver for Mr. Adams and certain other candidates on the Democratic state ticket. The city seems at present helplessly in the grip of the "ring" and only the drastic interference of the courts, the legislature and the state authorities can crush and punish the criminals who have for years controlled the election machinery. Colorado's first duty is to send these lawbreakers to jail. Its second duty is to amend the election laws so as to make the frauds of the last four or five years impossible of repetition. A strict personal registration system is needed, with provisions for watching and guarding the count which leave no chance for the forger and the tissue ballot operator. It is to be hoped that the present Republican legislature will strike a death blow to frauds in Denver, and that Colorado will emerge from its present struggle with the forces of corruption a politically cleaner and more truly self-governing state.

JUPITER'S SIXTH MOON.
Most of the satellites of the planets were discovered a century or more ago, and by foreigners, but the list is still growing, and American astronomers are having a creditable share in enlarging it. The latest achievement is reported from the Lick Observatory, which already had a similar one to its credit. Prior to 1892 Jupiter was supposed to have only four moons, all of them so distinctly visible that Galileo was able to observe them. About twelve years ago, however, then at the Lick Observatory, detected a fifth, and now Mr. Perrine has found a sixth, his suspicions of its existence first having been excited by scrutiny of photographs of the sky covering the vicinity of the giant planet. A comparison of pictures taken on different nights showed that the object which has attracted his attention was moving, and also that its path had Jupiter for its centre. Half a dozen moons have now been discovered in this country, the tiny pair which circulate about Mars having been observed by Asaph Hall in 1877 at the Naval Observatory in Washington, and two of the nine companions in Saturn having been found by Harvard astronomers. Bond reported one in 1845, and William H. Pickering another about six years ago.

What is probably the most important detail of Mr. Perrine's story is his belief that the sixth satellite of Jupiter moves in the opposite direction from the other five. Should this preliminary impression be confirmed, it will seem to have a bearing on the nebular hypothesis. One of the chief reasons for thinking that the whole solar system was organized out of a whirling mass or sheet of matter is that the planets all revolve around the sun from west to east, and that nearly all of the moons of the various planets move in the same manner about their primaries. Seven exceptions to the rule have been noted. Uranus has four moons, and they are all said to have a "retrograde" motion. The significance of this peculiarity is impaired by the fact that their orbits are almost at right angles to that of the planet, so that it is hard to say what is a forward or a backward movement. Neptune's sole attendant affords a more striking instance, and so do the ninth satellite of Saturn and the sixth of Jupiter. The oddity of their behavior is explicable on the assumption that they are adopted children of their parents—waifs picked up by the latter, just as certain comets have been attached to the solar system by the attraction of the large outer planets. The supposition still rests on conjecture but it assists in removing a contradiction to the theory of Laplace. Hence, if Mr. Perrine's suspicion concerning the interesting object which he has just found shall be verified, a discussion of the cause of the strange phenomenon and its meaning will undoubtedly ensue.

Marquette Eagle-Star: The legislature meets this week and the usual flow of bills will inundate the various committees. Every member ought to try for a record and see how few bills he can introduce. Of all the twaddle that is given respectful attention the many measures bi-annual-ly inflicted upon the legislature take the persimmon. In this connection it might be well to state that one of the most influential senators Wisconsin ever had was the late Senator Stebbins. He never introduced a bill or made a speech. Wisconsin has a great sufficiency of laws and just a few will do this winter.

Pond du Lac Reporter: Judge Dickey of Brooklyn recently announced a decision in a case for divorce which will prove of great importance if it is sustained by the higher court. The decision is to the effect that false representation as to name, fortune or social position does not constitute such a material fraud as would warrant a court setting aside a marriage based thereon. A pertinent part of the decision is as follows: "If all lying during courtship was a legal reason for the annulment of marriage our calendars would be crowded with cases. The marriage relation is too sacred to be trifled with in the way this plaintiff has done and wishes to do."

La Crosse Leader-Press: St. Croix county will make an attempt to have its affairs conducted by a commission of three or five members elected by the whole county instead of by the present county board system. The proposed plan is in use in some eastern states and has been tried in Wisconsin. In northern Wisconsin a few years ago where boodle county boards flourished and assisted county officers and logging companies to rob the county, it might have done some good. In some counties logging companies still control as their workmen in many of the towns and a combination with a certain element on the county board gives them logs

Milwaukee Journal: In a recent divorce proceeding it was shown that the husband would vent his spleen on his family by refraining from speaking a week at a time. Yet, in his business life he was known as a good fellow. He could tell stories by the hour, and his smile was infectious. He reserved all of his ill-nature for his home, and why it was so, or is so in hundreds of cases seems almost beyond explanation. If you are a human grouch, for heaven's sake don't take your bitterness past your own threshold. Get a grip on yourself and determine to carry sunshine at least to those bound to you by ties of blood.

Marquette Eagle-Star: The legislature meets this week and the usual flow of bills will inundate the various committees. Every member ought to try for a record and see how few bills he can introduce. Of all the twaddle that is given respectful attention the many measures bi-annual-ly inflicted upon the legislature take the persimmon. In this connection it might be well to state that one of the most influential senators Wisconsin ever had was the late Senator Stebbins. He never introduced a bill or made a speech. Wisconsin has a great sufficiency of laws and just a few will do this winter.

Pond du Lac Reporter: Judge Dickey of Brooklyn recently announced a decision in a case for divorce which will prove of great importance if it is sustained by the higher court. The decision is to the effect that false representation as to name, fortune or social position does not constitute such a material fraud as would warrant a court setting aside a marriage based thereon. A pertinent part of the decision is as follows: "If all lying during courtship was a legal reason for the annulment of marriage our calendars would be crowded with cases. The marriage relation is too sacred to be trifled with in the way this plaintiff has done and wishes to do."

Chicago Record-Herald: The tax list shows that Mrs. Astor's diamond stomacher is not one of the permanent institutions in New York.

Winnebago Local: It has been figured out that the late Captain Peabody died worth $8,750,000. Behr, what a lot of 5-cent-a-mug must have been taken inwardly.

Madison Journal: There were thirty murders reported in the United States on Christmas day and Milwaukee has had a suicide a day since New Year's. Something wrong with our strenuous social system.

Madison Democrat: A great man is near to death in Peoria in Bishop Shading. He has been a power for good and a great factor in educational work.

La Crosse Leader-Press: A movement is under way in Milwaukee for an ordinance requiring the inspection of all beer made before it leaves the brewery. If the ordinance is passed, it is expected there will be applicants for inspectors in plenty.

Racine Journal: If people fanatically supposed the Northern Securities case had been settled, they are mistaken. It now goes to the supreme court at Washington, and even if decided there, may again be reheard and all that sort of thing.

Oshkosh Northwestern: Science says there are about 200,000,000 to 300,000,000 atoms in every inch of your razor's edge, but it is only when you lose about 10,000,000 of them that you notice any difference. Science is as reckless with its millions as Mrs. Chadwick.

Oconto Reporter: While in one of the country villages recently we were credibly informed that beef on the hoof had been sold there the day before for a cent and a half a pound, much of it ready for butchering. If this is true it shows there is also a large "take-off" between the hoof and the "block" going to somebody, and the government is doing the proper thing in pushing its suit against the meat trust.

La Crosse Chronicle: The Minnesota clergyman who has been asked to resign because he raced his fast horse on the ice should have known better. There were plenty of dirt roads in the state, and a number of race tracks. A preacher ought to be able to confine his race horse sporting proclivities to the summer season anyway.

Exchange: Admirers of Mark Twain will recall his famous letter to Queen Victoria. According to "I don't own account he once wrote: 'I don't know you personally, but I have met you in the procession in the Strand and I was on a bus.' During a late visit to London Mark Twain was presented to King Edward, who showed his appreciation of the American by remarking: 'I have met you before. You must remember, it was on the Strand and you were riding on a bus.'

CHAIRMAN GOT A BLANK STARE

FOR SUGGESTING THAT COUNTY FATHERS FINISH TODAY.

SUTHERLAND CITY PHYSICIAN

Resolution Calling for Consolidation of Two School Superintendents Districts Rescinded Today.

When Chairman Livermore of the county board asked that body this morning if they could not finish up the business of the session today, he was greeted with a blank stare. No body spoke and the subject was dismissed in abject silence. All but Supervisor Gillies of Evansville answered to roll-call. The reports of the county clerk and register of deeds were received and accepted. Committee 14 was asked to take under advisement the report of Postmaster Siegmiller of Beloit. The building committee was instructed to secure estimates for an addition to the vault in the county judge's office. Chairman R. W. Cheever of the committee on tax certificates and illegal taxes reported and the findings of that committee were accepted.

City Physician Sutherland Poor Commissioner Kenyon reported that he had let the contract for medical attendance for the poor in the city of Janesville during the ensuing year to Dr. Charles H. Sutherland, the latter agreeing to perform the above services and also care for the prisoners in the Rock county jail from Jan. 1 to Dec. 31, 1905, for the sum of one hundred dollars. No provision appears to have been made for the prisoners in the city lockup by this report. The same was adopted.

Not to Consolidate Chairman McGowan of the special committee which has had under advisement the question of consolidation of the two county school superintendents districts, reported in favor of rescinding the resolution calling for such change. Supervisor Cheever introduced a resolution calling for such action and the same was adopted. Supervisor of Assessments Frank P. Starr asked that the employment of a deputy to assist in some of the work be authorized and a resolution permitting the employment of such a deputy at a salary of not more than $2 a day for a period not exceeding 25 days, was passed.

TAKES ARM OFF TO SAVE LIFE

Dr. Sutherland Amputates Miss Davis' Arm at Palmer Hospital Today.

This morning at 10 o'clock, at the Palmer Memorial hospital, Dr. Fred Sutherland, assistant to Drs. Q. O. Sutherland and Charles Sutherland, amputated the right arm of Miss Rachel Davis at the joint of the middle and upper thirds. Miss Davis has had trouble with her arm for the past eighteen months. Last May she went to Chicago and a noted Chicago surgeon operated for the condition. After two weeks' stay in the hospital she returned to Janesville very little improved. On the 31st of December last she was thrown from a cutter and sustained a compound fracture in the affected part. On account of the diseased condition union was impossible and with symptoms of the onset of a general blood poisoning it became necessary to amputate. It is reported that the operation was successful and that Miss Davis is doing nicely.

BRIEF LOCAL NOTES.

Three incurables. Three male patients, whose homes were in Rock county, have been returned to the county asylum from Mendota, having been pronounced incurable. Arthur Chapin who once resided on a farm in the town of Janesville and Miles Hulbert who lived in this city for a number of years are two of the three.

Meet Friday. All members of W. H. Sargent, W. R. C. No. 21 are requested to meet at East Side Odd Fellows' hall Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Those that wish may bring lunch and not return home until after installation, which is held in the evening. Let there be a full attendance. By order of the president.

Regular Meeting. The regular monthly business meeting of the Art league will be held in the science room of the high school, Friday, at 3 p. m. Illustrated lecture by Prof. Wright on "The Forum" at 4 o'clock.

Mending the Wires. James Frazier of the Wisconsin Telephone Co., who has been in Monroe for several weeks past, returned to Janesville last evening. He reports that during the few days he has had plenty of work re-stringing wires between this city and Monroe which were put out of commission by the recent sleet storm.

At Theatre Tonight. At the Myers theatre this evening the Davidson Stock Co. opens a three night engagement with Saturday matinee, in the drama "Dens and Palaces." There are ten artists who appear in the specialties between the acts and it is believed that patrons of the playhouse will be thoroughly pleased with every bill that is offered.

Police Bureau Shanty. Last night the police burned a shanty on the bank of the river near Crooks' brewery and not far from the hand-car house. The building was about 10x5 feet in dimensions and was built by a number of small boys of various ages for the purpose of a "club-house." Of late complaints have been coming in that the youngsters were having too hilarious a time there and fearing that it might yet become a "bandit's dug-out" it was decided to destroy it. Many who saw the flames feared that one of the boys' houses was burning.

A Special Verdict. In the action of the town of Beloit vs. J. A. Heinemann for repairs on a stone crusher the jury brought in a special verdict that if the count found plaintiff entitled to anything, said plaintiff should receive $235.55.

Lectures Tomorrow. Prof. Theodore Lyman Wright will deliver five more lectures on Roman Art before the Art league, the one tomorrow afternoon being "The Forum." Later is given at four o'clock in the science

CANTILLON WILL BE SUCCESSFUL

Is a Dominant Figure in the Western Base Ball League, and Owner of the Des Moines Team.

Joseph Cantillon, a former Janesville baseball player, late manager of the Milwaukee league team and now a magnate in the western league and owner of the Des Moines team, is playing an important part in the western baseball league. There are many Janesville men who knew Joe Cantillon years ago, when he and his brothers were baseball players of note even as small boys. At one time or another they drifted into professional baseball and then out again, except Joe and he is now one of the top-notchers of the western league. Today he is in Omaha and from newspaper accounts is dominating the election of president of his league. His professional friends watch with interest his rise in his chosen profession.

ROBERT EDESON AND MISS PERCITE WEST

Delighted Large Audience in "Ransom's Folly" Last Evening—To Put On "Strongheart" Next Week.

After "Tris" it was pleasant to get back to simple, healthy drama with no "problem," no cynical reflections on life—but real men and women breathing pure air out on the alkali plain. "Ransom's Folly" is a commonplace little drama woven of a rather fanciful incident of a stage hold-up wherein an impetuous, harem-scum army officer, chafing under the monotony of army post life, conceives and acts on a whim to show his companions that no particular courage is required to act the high-woman's part, and that a "red rider" and unwittingly becomes involved in the success of the real "terror of the roads" in robbing and wounding the postmaster who chances to follow him another vehicle. Such a plot might easily become the basis for melodrama of the most lurid type with the accompanying flourish of "bad men" and guns, the ranting of the "sard man" with his overpowering mustachios, the violent wailing of the stars and stripes at proper intervals in the hero's career, and shrieks from the heroine calculated to put the whole gallery in a tumult. Of course nothing of this sort occurs in a story written by Richard Harding Davis and presented by such talented actors as Robert Edeson and his company. The ranting stage soldier is displaced; brass-buttons and tinsel relegated to the background in an essentially "army play." The scene at the mess table in the first act, the latering toast of Lieut. Wadleigh and the bantering comment of his associates, the chaffing which Ransom receives for boasting of his service in Cuba and the Philippines, is very effective in presenting an intimate, honest picture of army life, devoid of the false and spectacular. Miss Percite West plays the part of the postmaster's daughter with such admirable restraint and sweetness, and possesses a personality and expression of such rare charm that it is hard to believe that anyone could ever have taken the role before her. The press picture description "madonna-like" is not overdrawn. Robert Edeson is at all times graceful, brilliant, dashing officer nervous and impetuous and possessed of a fair share of faults mostly due to the luxury of his early life. He seldom overdoes his part, though the temptations to do so must be great. Sergeant Clancy (Lawrence Sheehan) ejaculating "Hell!" so feebly with a revolver that one instinctively knows he is in the real army barracks. This part of "Cahill" is a strong one and the character is one of the most complex and admirable in the drama—rough-hewn and dignified, yet possessed of many of the finest qualities of human nature as well as some of the worst. In the denouement when he shows his readiness to sacrifice his own happiness for a sin he did not feel guilty one may go unscathed, he becomes the noblest figure in the play. Edmund Broese's characterization is superb. The company will present "Ransom's Folly" in Milwaukee for the last time Saturday evening. Thereafter they will immediately leave for New York to commence their engagement in "Strongheart"—a new play in which they first appeared in St. Paul two weeks ago. Miss West will again be Edeson's leading lady in this play.

WILL COST MORE THAN LAST YEAR

Prices of Commodities Are Higher This Year Than During 1904.

It is going to cost more to live during the year 1905 than last year unless there is a change in market prices for general commodities. Prices have been going up higher until many commodities are higher now than ever before. The housewife is confronted with a hard proposition unless the breadwinner of the house secures an increase in salary to correspond with the increase in the price of provisions. Coffee, sugar, some brands of tea and flour and other commodities have gone up and dealers declare the end is not in sight. Coffee in particular is selling at war time prices. There was a shortage in the crop in many places last season and this and the prevailing good times and a larger consumption has sent the prices skyward.

The war in Japan has had some effect on the prices of coffee as well as on the price of tea, but not as much as the average person would believe. Japanese tea has advanced. As long as Japan has control of the naval situation the war will have no effect on the price of tea, but the Russian navy control the situation in the orient there would surely be a shortage and prices would go up. Japanese products are no higher now than at the commencement of the war. At that time it was believed Japan would soon lose control of the ocean and that it would be impossible to import anything from there, but it has proved quite the reverse.

Town Talk.

Perhaps a year or more ago there were gathered together at a table in a certain boarding-house in Janesville a mysterious telegraph school student of whom little has ever been learned save that he was a Pinkerton detective here on some errand of his craft, a well-known lawyer, and a dentist. The two latter possessed a common ailment—dyspepsia—and on this particular occasion they complained in the hearing of the supposed telegraph student. Thereupon the latter ventured to assure them that if they would take his medicine he would permanently cure them—that the treatment knew no such word as fail. The dyspeptics agreed after some hesitation, being in a mood to grasp at straws but not possessing much confidence in the stranger. The next day the latter brought them each a few dozen small capsules, strictly charging them in making no effort to ascertain the character of the contents, but to take one after each meal, this treatment to be supplemented by several glasses of water between meals. Secretly the lawyer and the dentist drew cuts to see who would try it first and it came to pass that the first was destined for the sacrifice. After a few days a transformation in his entire character and outlook on the world in general became noticeable. He no longer spoke bitterly of the little annoyances of life but seemed more and more to regard one whole span of existence as one unceasing round of merriment and mirth. The lawyer, seeing this, seized his portion of those pills and began to swallow them with avidity. In the course of six weeks the patients compared notes and found that they were nearly well—but the capsules were all gone and the mysterious Samaritan, who had pointed out the road leading to the oasis, had left the city as quietly as he entered. It looked like a bad situation to the lawyer. Then said the dentist: "I hate to tell it, but do you know I broke faith with that fellow and made an examination of the contents of those capsules before he began to take them. I could find nothing in them but clean sand and a small pinch of table-salt." Said the lawyer: "The stuff looked like a plain ordinary rock-puff under the microscope. I could find nothing in it. Let us get some empty capsules and let out to some vacant lot and gather more sand." And they did. And both waxed healthy and strong and both tell you today that there is more virtue in old Mother Earth than the drugs of a dozen pharmacies. More drugs is no fable but as certain as is the presence of grey wolves in the environs of Lake Koshkonong—even more certain, if possible.

Martin Paulson Got Into Peculiar Difficulty with Team at Sugar Factory.

Two horses driven by Martin Paulson, a teamster at the sugar factory, were badly burned as the result of walking into a pile of lime which had been mixed with water from the melting snow. One of the animals lost its footing and fell and in trying to extricate the poor beasts the teamster, himself, was nearly blinded, and narrowly escaped permanently losing his eyesight.

COLD WAVE DUE HERE VERY SOON

Offshoot of the Southern California Storm Will Visit Janesville Tonight.

An offshoot of the southern California storm moved rapidly to the extreme southern Lake Michigan with slightly increased intensity. This storm has caused general rains over the southern and snow over the northern districts from the Rocky mountains eastward to Washington New England, says the Washington weather bureau.

Heavy snow fell in the middle slope and lower Missouri and upper Mississippi valleys and heavy rains in the lower Ohio valley.

Temperatures are very much higher in the Ohio valley and southern portion of the lake region, ranging from 5 degrees to 10 degrees above the seasonal average. There will be general rains or snow Thursday in the lake region. There will be snow Friday in the lower lake region and along Lake Superior.

It will be much colder Thursday in the central valleys and Gulf states, and colder Friday in the eastern lower lake region. The winds of Lake Michigan will be brisk to high north to northwest. Forecast for Thursday and Friday: For Wisconsin—Thursday much colder in eastern and central portion. Friday fair, brisk northerly winds.

WILL COST MORE THAN LAST YEAR

Prices of Commodities Are Higher This Year Than During 1904.

It is going to cost more to live during the year 1905 than last year unless there is a change in market prices for general commodities. Prices have been going up higher until many commodities are higher now than ever before. The housewife is confronted with a hard proposition unless the breadwinner of the house secures an increase in salary to correspond with the increase in the price of provisions. Coffee, sugar, some brands of tea and flour and other commodities have gone up and dealers declare the end is not in sight. Coffee in particular is selling at war time prices. There was a shortage in the crop in many places last season and this and the prevailing good times and a larger consumption has sent the prices skyward.

The war in Japan has had some effect on the prices of coffee as well as on the price of tea, but not as much as the average person would believe. Japanese tea has advanced. As long as Japan has control of the naval situation the war will have no effect on the price of tea, but the Russian navy control the situation in the orient there would surely be a shortage and prices would go up. Japanese products are no higher now than at the commencement of the war. At that time it was believed Japan would soon lose control of the ocean and that it would be impossible to import anything from there, but it has proved quite the reverse.

Town Talk.

Perhaps a year or more ago there were gathered together at a table in a certain boarding-house in Janesville a mysterious telegraph school student of whom little has ever been learned save that he was a Pinkerton detective here on some errand of his craft, a well-known lawyer, and a dentist. The two latter possessed a common ailment—dyspepsia—and on this particular occasion they complained in the hearing of the supposed telegraph student. Thereupon the latter ventured to assure them that if they would take his medicine he would permanently cure them—that the treatment knew no such word as fail. The dyspeptics agreed after some hesitation, being in a mood to grasp at straws but not possessing much confidence in the stranger. The next day the latter brought them each a few dozen small capsules, strictly charging them in making no effort to ascertain the character of the contents, but to take one after each meal, this treatment to be supplemented by several glasses of water between meals. Secretly the lawyer and the dentist drew cuts to see who would try it first and it came to pass that the first was destined for the sacrifice. After a few days a transformation in his entire character and outlook on the world in general became noticeable. He no longer spoke bitterly of the little annoyances of life but seemed more and more to regard one whole span of existence as one unceasing round of merriment and mirth. The lawyer, seeing this, seized his portion of those pills and began to swallow them with avidity. In the course of six weeks the patients compared notes and found that they were nearly well—but the capsules were all gone and the mysterious Samaritan, who had pointed out the road leading to the oasis, had left the city as quietly as he entered. It looked like a bad situation to the lawyer. Then said the dentist: "I hate to tell it, but do you know I broke faith with that fellow and made an examination of the contents of those capsules before he began to take them. I could find nothing in them but clean sand and a small pinch of table-salt." Said the lawyer: "The stuff looked like a plain ordinary rock-puff under the microscope. I could find nothing in it. Let us get some empty capsules and let out to some vacant lot and gather more sand." And they did. And both waxed healthy and strong and both tell you today that there is more virtue in old Mother Earth than the drugs of a dozen pharmacies. More drugs is no fable but as certain as is the presence of grey wolves in the environs of Lake Koshkonong—even more certain, if possible.

OSBORN IS THE NEW PRESIDENT

Last evening the Janesville Trades Council at its regular meeting elected officers for the ensuing year. The installation will occur two weeks hence. New officers:

Greatest Of Auto Meets

Race Carnival on Florida Beach Course to Be Marked by Notable Fea- tures—Vanderbilt to Race—The Schedule. Fournier Coming Over.

The greatest automobile meet of the year in this country occurs during the week ending Jan. 28 and will take place over the Ormond-Daytona beach course in Florida.

This winter's races constitute the third annual tournament and will, as heretofore, be given under the auspices of the Florida East Coast Automobile association. The official headquarters of the great meet will be at Ormond, but the tournament will be divided equally between the latter place and the pretty city of Daytona, which is the headquarters of the Florida East Coast Automobile association.

The Ormond-Daytona speed course is a tide rolled beach. Only three years ago it was brought to the attention of automobilists by W. J. Morgan of New York, who went to Florida and decided to give a tournament. In less than thirty days a small affair as compared with that of last winter was successfully run off.

The geologist accounts for the unequalled condition of the smooth beach by the presence of a small shell known as the coquina, which is found there in great abundance. When it disintegrates it combines with the sand, and its limelike properties cement the entire beach. As an evidence of how perfect the beach surface is a three ton bus with corrugated tires scarcely leaves a mark on its surface, so it is little wonder that experts expect a mile in better than thirty-five seconds.

Every country will be represented, and the races for the international cup

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills are a most remarkable remedy for the relief of periodic pains, backache, nervous or sick headache, or any of the distressing aches and pains that cause women so much suffering.

As pain is weakening, and leaves the system in an exhausted condition, it is wrong to suffer a moment longer than necessary, and you should take the Anti-Pain Pills on first indication of an attack.

If taken as directed you may have entire confidence in their effectiveness, as well as in the fact that they will leave no disagreeable after-effects.

They contain no morphine, opium, chloral, cocaine or other dangerous drugs.

"For a long time I have suffered greatly with spells of backache, that seem almost more than I can endure. These attacks come on every month, and last two or three days. I have never been able to get anything that would give me much relief until I began the use of Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills, and they always relieve me in a short time. My sister, who suffers the same way, has used them with the same results. MRS. PARK, 721 S. Michigan St., South Bend, Ind."

GOTHAM FEARS YELLOW FEVER

Panama Canal Official Is Quarantined When He Reaches New York.

New York, Jan. 12.—The body of Mrs. John H. Seager, wife of the secretary to Chief Engineer Wallace of the Panama canal zone, who died at Panama of yellow fever, was brought here on the steamer City of Washington. Mr. Seager, who accompanied the body, was ill when the steamer arrived and although the case had been diagnosed by the ship's doctors as malaria he was sent to the observation hospital at Hoffman Island. Health Officer Doty said the diagnosis of the ship's doctors might be incorrect, as he had no history of the illness.

In view of the recent death of Mrs. Seager of yellow fever and the fact that Mr. Seager is returning from the locality where she died, together with his symptoms, Dr. Doty said, the sick man's condition might well be regarded as suspicious.

After his arrival the school authorities say he suffered from homesickness and it is thought that he killed himself while homesick. He left the school without permission and, according to witnesses, was seen pacing the platform of the railway station late at night.

Character Told by the Chin.

The chin is one of the most substantial parts of the face when it is normal, and by physiognomists is said to register unerringly certain characteristics, to tell on one for wealth or woe. Others say that this is not so, for one may smile and yet be a villain, and the smile is what makes the facial characteristic.

Origin of Petroleum.

Until recently it was almost universally believed that petroleum, like coal, was derived from fossil vegetation or possibly from animals or fishes of some long past age. Now it is asserted by many scientific men that it may not be of any organic origin, but may be due to subterranean chemical action.

An Epitaph.

His antics are weary.
He's footsore and lame;
Sensations of vice
Rise all over his frame.
He is dizzy and faint
With the roar of the throng—
His wife went out shopping
And took him along.

She is fragile and fair.
He is lusty and tall.
Yet she's living as a bird
And enjoying it all.
He says for his tombstone
These words won't be wrong:
"My wife went out shopping
And took me along."

"It is fearfully short—the time, I mean," he said after another pause. "We can't count on any help from any one in authority. Guilford's broom has swept the high-salaried official corners clean. But the wage-people are mutinous and ripe for anything. I'll go and find out where we stand." And he groped on the floor of the veranda for his hat.

"No, wait a minute," she interposed. "We are not quite ready to adjourn yet. There remains a little matter of compensation—your compensation—to be considered. You are still on the company's pay-roll?"

"In a way, yes; as its legal representative on the ground."

"That won't do. If you carry this thing through successfully it must be on your own account, and not as the company's paid servant. You must resign and make terms with Boston beforehand; and that, too, without telling Boston what you propose to do."

He haggled a little at that.

IT ALWAYS HELPS
An ailment like consumption that has been months and years getting a foothold cannot be relieved in a week or day. Scott's Emulsion will always afford relief and often cure, but not over night.

The consistent use of Scott's Emulsion will positively help the consumptive at any stage of the disease. We guarantee nothing beyond this, but we know that right living and Scott's Emulsion have done more to cure consumption than anything else.

Scott & Bowne, 409 Pearl St., New York.

"The company is entitled to my services," he asserted.

"It is entitled to what it pays for—your legal services. But this is entirely different. You will be acting upon your own initiative, and you'll have to spend money like water at your own risk. You must be free to deal with Boston as an outsider."

"But I have no money to spend," he objected.

Again the brown eyes grew luminous; and again she said:

"What would you do without me? Happily, my information came early enough to enable me to get a letter to Mr. Ormsby. He answered promptly by wire this morning. Here is his telegram."

She had been winding a tightly folded slip of paper around her fingers, and she smoothed it out and gave it to him. He held it in a patch of the electric light between the dancing leaf shadows and read:

"Plot Number Two approved. Have wired one hundred thousand to Kent's order Security Bank. Have him draw as he needs."

"So now you see," she went on, "you have the sinews of war. But you must regard it as an advance and name your fee to the Boston folk so you can pay it back."

He protested again, rather weakly. "It looks like extortion, like another graft," he said; and now she lost patience with him.

"Or all the Puritan fanatics!" she cried. "If it were a simple commercial transaction by which you would save your clients a round $70,000,000, which would otherwise be lost, would you scruple to take a proportionate fee?"

"No; certainly not."

"Well, then; you go and tell Mr. Loring to wire his Advisory Board, and to do it to-night."

"But I'll have to name a figure," said Kent.

"Of course," she replied. Kent thought about it for a long minute. Then he said: "I wonder if $10,000, and expenses, would paralyze them?"

Miss Van Brock's comment was a little shriek of derision.

"I knew you'd make difficulties when it came to the paying part of it, and since I didn't know, myself, I wired Mr. Ormsby again. Here is what he says," and she untwisted a second telegram and read it to him. "Fee should not be less than five per cent. of bonded indebtedness; four-fifths in stock at par; one-fifth cash; no cure, no pay."

"Three million five hundred thousand dollars!" gasped Kent.

"It's only nominally that much," she laughed. "The stock part of it is merely your guaranty of good faith. It is worth next to nothing now, and it will be many a long day before it goes to par, even if you are successful in saving its life. So your magnificent fee shrinks to $700,000, less your expenses."

"But heavens and earth! that's awful!" said Kent.

"Not when you consider it as a surgeon's risk. You happen to be the one man who has the idea, and if it isn't carried out, the patient is going to die to-morrow night, permanently. You are the specialist in this case, and specialists come high. Now you may go and attend to the preliminary details, if you like."

He found his hat and stood up. She stood with him; but when he took her hand she made him sit down again.

"You have at least three degrees of fever!" she exclaimed; "or is it only the $2,500,000 shock? What have you been doing to yourself?"

"Nothing. I assure you. I haven't been sleeping very well for a few nights. But that is only natural."

"And I said you must have a cool head! Will you do exactly as I tell you to?"

"If you don't make it too hard."

"Take the car down-town—don't walk—and, after you have made Mr. Loring send his message to Boston, you go straight to Dr. Bidloe. Tell him what is the matter with you, and that you need to sleep the clock around."

"But the time!" he protested. "I shall need every hour between now and to-morrow night!"

"One clear-headed hour is worth a dozen muddled ones. You do as I say."

"I hate drugs," he said, rising again.

"So do I, but there is a time for everything under the sun. It is a crying necessity that you go into this fight perfectly fit and with all your wits about you. If you don't, somebody—several somebodies—will land in the penitentiary. Will you mind me?"

"Yes," he promised; and this time he got away.

CHAPTER XXV.
ON THE HIGH PLAINS.

Much to Elinor's relief, and quite as much, perhaps, to Penelope's, Mrs. Brentwood tired of Broezeeland Inn in less than a fortnight and began to talk of returning to the capital.

Pressed to give a reason for her dissatisfaction, the younger sister might have been at a loss to account for it in words; but Elinor's desire to cut the outing short was based upon pride and militant shame. After many trappings she had succeeded in making her mother confess that the stay at Broezeeland was at Ormsby's expense; and not of Mrs. Brentwood's petulant justifiings could remove the sting of the nettle of obligation.

"There is no reason in the world why you should make so much of it; I am your mother, and I ought to know," was Mrs. Brentwood's dictum. "You wouldn't have any scruples if we were his guests on the Amphitrite or in his country house on Long Island."

"That would be different," Elinor contended. "We are not his guests here; we are his pensioners."

"Nonsense!" frowned the mother. "Isn't it beginning to occur to you that beggars shouldn't be choosers? And, besides, so far as you are concerned, you are only anticipating a little."

It was an exceedingly injudicious.

not to say brutal way of putting it; and the blue-gray eyes flashed fire.

"Can't you see that you are daily making a marriage between us more and more impossible?" was the bitter rejoinder. Elinor's mother was cool composure under fire, but she was not always able to compass it.

Mrs. Brentwood fanned herself vigorously. She had been aching to have it out with this self-willed young woman who was playing fast and loose with attainable millions, and the hour had struck.

"What made you break it off with Brookes Ormsby?" she snapped; adding: "I don't wonder you were ashamed to tell me about it."

"I did not break it off; and I was not ashamed," Elinor had regained.

"What made you break it off with Brookes Ormsby?" she snapped; adding: "I don't wonder you were ashamed to tell me about it."

"What made you break it off with Brookes Ormsby?" she snapped; adding: "I don't wonder you were ashamed to tell me about it."

"I did not break it off; and I was not ashamed," Elinor had regained.

"No; it is his just due. But I can't help being sorry for him, Ellie. What will you do if he says it doesn't make any difference?"

The blue-gray eyes were downcast. "I don't know. Having asked so much, and accepted so much from him—it shall be as he says, mother."

The afternoon had been all that a summer afternoon on the brown highlands can be, and the powerful touring car had swept them from mile to mile over the dun hills like an earth-shaking dragon whose wing-beat was the muffled, explosive thud of the motor.

Through most of the miles Elinor had given herself up to silent enjoyment of the rapture of swift motion, and Ormsby had respected her mood, as he always did. But when they were on the high hills beyond the mining-camp of Meglin, and he had thrown the engines out of gear to brake the car gently down the long inclines, there was room for speech.

"This is our last spin together on the high plains, I suppose," he said. "Your mother has fixed upon to-morrow for our return to town, hasn't she?"

Elinor confirmed it half-absently. She had been keyed up to face the inevitable in this drive with Ormsby, and she was afraid now that he was going to break her resolution by a dip into the commonplaces.

"Are you glad or sorry?" he asked. Her reply was evasive.

"I have enjoyed the thin, clean air and the freedom of the wide horizons. Who could help it?"

"But you have not been entirely happy?"

It was on her lips to say some conventional thing about the constant jarring note in all human happiness, but she changed it to a simple "No."

"May I try if I can give the reason?" She made a reluctant little gesture of assent; some such signal of acquiescence as Marie Antoinette may have given the waiting headman.

"You have been afraid every day to test you for an answer, haven't you?" She could not thrust and parry with him. They were past all that.

"Yes," she admitted briefly. "You break my heart, Elinor," he said, after a long pause. "But," with a sudden tightening of the lips—"I'm not going to break yours."

She understood him, and her eyes filled quickly with the swift shock of gratitude.

"If you had made a study of woman-kind through ten lifetimes instead of a part of one, you could not know when and where to strike truer and deeper," she said; and then softly: "Why can't you make me love you, Brookes?"

He took his foot from the brake-pedal, and for ten seconds the released car shot down the slope un hindered. Then he checked the speed and answered her.

"A little while ago, I would have said I didn't know; but now I do know. It is because you love me, David Kent; you loved him before I did my chance."

She did not deny the principal fact, but she gave him his opportunity to set it aside if he could—and would.

"Call it foolish, romantic sentiment, if you like. Is there no way to shame me out of it?"

He shook his head slowly. "You don't mean that?"

"But if I say that I do; if I insist that I am willing to be shamed out of it."

His smile was that of a brother who remembers tardily to be loving-kind. "I shall leave that task for some one who cares less for you and for your true happiness than I do, or ever shall. And it will be a mighty thankless service that that 'some one' will render you."

"But I ought to be whipped and sent to bed," she protested, almost tearfully. "How do you know what I have done?"

She could not quite put it in words, even for him, and he helped her generously, as before.

"I know what Kent hasn't done; which is more to the point. But he will do it fast enough if you will give him half a chance."

"No," she said definitively. "I say yes. One thing, and one thing only, has kept him from telling you any time since last autumn: that is a sort of a final loyalty to me. I saw how matters stood when he came aboard of our train at Gaston—I'm asking you to believe that I didn't know it before—and I saw then that my only hope was to make a handfast friend of him. And I did it."

"I believe you can do anything you try to do," she said warmly.

Home Health Club

By DAVID H. REEDER, Ph.D., M.D.
La Porte, Ind.

Sleeplessness is, to those who suffer from it, one of the most distressing of maladies, and I constantly receive letters from such people. I have just been reading a long chapter upon that dread disease. The writer advocates the hydropathic method of cure, and his suggestions are scientific and sensible.

When used by a nurse in the case of a bedridden patient, they are the most practical I have ever examined. But the majority of persons affected are not invalids—in fact, they seem to enjoy perfect health in every way except a tired feeling caused by loss of sleep.

Many people can readily hypnotize themselves, but with some, the more they try to concentrate or compose the mind, the farther they get from sleep. Drugs congest the blood, and thus stupefy the brain; a condition of coma resembling sleep ensues, but the person is not refreshed nor rested as by natural sleep.

Where insomnia is caused by over-activity of the brain, it is only necessary to draw the blood away from the head to some other portion of the body, and if this is accomplished in a natural and legitimate manner, the result is beneficial, and the sleep which ensues accomplishes the work for which it was designed. For brain workers this result may be easily and naturally accomplished by a simple, quiet method of exercise after going to bed.

The first requisite is plenty of pure, fresh air, and not too much bed clothing. Before or after retiring practice deep breathing for 10 or 15 minutes, inhaling as well as exhaling all of the air possible. If that is done after retiring, the pillow should be removed so that the body lies on a level. After feeling sure that the blood has been thoroughly oxygenized, direct the mind to each portion of the body as it is exercised, and think of that only.

First, with both hands, thoroughly massage the back of the head and neck, moving the flesh deeply in all directions, and then rotate the head from side to side as far as possible, while it is raised slightly from the bed. After this has been done about two dozen times, the pillow may be replaced and the mind should be directed to the muscles of the back, and they should be tensed and relaxed—that is, made hard and firm, as if for a lift or hard muscular effort, and then relaxed. Every muscle of the body may, in this manner, be brought under the direction of the active will and exercised at pleasure. This process should be continued downward until the feet are reached, when they should be stretched as far as possible from the head downward, at the same time pressing upward with the top of the head and downward with the hands.

Relax and push down with only the right foot, making the toes describe a circle as widely as possible, while holding the leg rigid. Repeat 24 times, and then make the same experiment with the left foot.

Flax the right knee, bringing it as far and as strongly upward as possible. While in this position tense and relax the muscles of the leg from hip to toes 24 times. Repeat with left leg.

Now direct the thoughts to the arms, and place them at full length by the side, and again repeat the tensing and relaxing exercise ten times, and then flex the arm until the hand is just over the brachial plexus, which is a point between the shoulders and the center of the chest. Hold the hand a little above the chest, so that it does not touch the body, then tense and relax ten times.

Lie upon the right side, and you will be asleep, almost as soon as you have ceased the work. Care should be used that the mind remains fixed upon the exercise, for if it gets back to the brain work which caused the trouble, it is liable to undo your work and remain awake in spite of you, but this is not likely.

These exercises will have a tendency to promote the general health, and will greatly strengthen the muscles. Only one difficulty will be hard to overcome in these exercises, and that is to relax the head and neck after the rotation of the former from right to left. Allow the head to rest easily and calmly upon the pillow, and allow no strain to be manifest in the neck. Relax the jaws, also, as they are generally set hard together during sleeplessness, and relaxed during sleep.

Eat no meat or other muscle-making food for supper; fruit, rice, milk, toast, or other light articles are best. A glass of very hot milk just before retiring is an excellent thing, as it soothes the nerves and strengthens the entire body. It should not be boiled, but heated to the boiling point, and then sipped slowly.

Steamed Fig Pudding.
One-half pint of bread crumbs, one-fourth pound of butter, one-half pound of moist figs, chopped; two eggs, one-half cupful of sugar and a pinch of salt. Mix well, place in a buttered mold and steam for three hours.—Chicago Post.

The Limit.
"For a lawyer, he's most peculiar, I hear. Awfully conscientious, isn't he?"
"Oh, yes. He put up a sign 'Back in 20 minutes' on his door the other day. It happened that he got back in ten, so he sat on the stairs until the other ten minutes were up."—Louisville-Courier-Journal.

Gold Turkey.
If any of the cold turkey remains, mince it and make this very good entree: Stew half a can of tomatoes with a bay leaf, a little sugar, salt, red pepper, and a very little curry powder. Strain and add a teaspoonful of beef extract, a tablespoonful of butter, and a tablespoonful of grated bread crumbs. Return to the fire and stir in the minced turkey and a dozen or more French mushrooms coarsely chopped. Let it get very hot and serve in paper cases.—N. Y. Post.

She is troubled with her back. It gives out very suddenly, and she cannot straighten up. The pain seems to be across the small of the back. She will suffer from this trouble for two or three days and then she will be well again and continue so for a week or ten days, when the pain will return. She is sometimes troubled with frequent discharges of urine of a reddish color. She is 50 years old, and does her own work. Lives on very plain food, and drinks coffee. Can

RUSSIANS LOOK FOR AN ATTACK

Division Commander Notifies His Superiors That He Expects His Ships to Be Fired On by the Enemy in the Indian Ocean.

London, Jan. 12.—Vice Admiral Uru, who destroyed the Russian cruiser Varyag and the gunboat Korietz, at Chemulpo, on the first day of the war, is believed to be the commander of the Japanese fleet supposed to be cruising in the vicinity of Diego Garcia, in the Chagos archipelago.

Japanese correspondents of the Morning Post state that Vice Admiral Uru has been cruising in the vicinity of the equator for some time past. The number of vessels he has is kept secret, but doubtless he is ready to do battle with the Russian Baltic squadron whenever it appears east of the seventieth meridian.

Russians Expect Attack.

The Port Louis, Mauritius, correspondent of the Daily Mail says that Vice Admiral Voelkersam, commanding one division of the Russian Baltic fleet, informed the commander of the steamer Omsk that he expected to be attacked in the Indian ocean by the Japanese. He asked for a chart of the harbor of Diego Suarez, Madagascar. He said he believed the Baltic fleet would call at Mahé, in the Seychelle islands.

Vice Admiral Kamimura's whereabouts is a mystery, the Morning Post's Japanese correspondents say, but possibly his squadron is in the China sea, within easy steaming distance of either the Malacca or Sunda straits, but, anyway, they declare, if Vice Admiral Rojostvensky purposes to spend the ensuing weeks in cruising in the vicinity of Madagascar, it is not improbable that he will find himself assailed by a torpedo fleet.

MORALS IN THE ORIENT CALLED UNSPEAKABLE

Missionaries Tell Shocking Stories of Conduct of Americans and Europeans in Far Away Lands.

New York, Jan. 12.—Resident communities of Europeans and Americans in Asiatic and South American countries were charged with the grossest immorality at the twelfth annual council of missionary secretaries which began at the Bible house.

The Rev. E. A. Wicher, who lived in Japan for several years as a representative of the Canadian Presbyterian church, said:

"The moral conditions of oriental cities, particularly in China and Japan, are almost unspeakable. I know one city—I won't say where—in which 1,500 Europeans and Americans lived. Among them were 302 young men, of whom—very carefully—about twenty kept native women as mistresses. All the total abstainers in that 400 could be counted on the fingers of both hands.

"All this has an irreparable effect on our mission work. The natives argue that if Christianity results thus, they will have none of it. These European residents sitting in their clubs do far more harm than can anything else to the missionary cause. It is to these clubs that tourists resort, and from them come back home the derogatory reports we hear of missionary efforts."

Other speakers mentioned Tokio, Yokohama and Kobe in Japan and Peking in China as containing temptations especially to inclined men. A committee is to investigate the subject still further and report.
